ANXIOUS CREDITORS.

They Levy on Connors & Murphy's Clothing Stock at Two O'clock this Morning.

Other Creditors Find Themselves on the Outside—Assets and Liabilities.

Deputy Clerk Richardson, of the circuit court, was routed out of bed at two o'clock this morning to issue an attachment against the stock of Connors & Murphy. A little later the door bell rang to announce Sheriff Ward, and at three o'clock, Connors & Murphy's store was in the sheriff's hands.

The attachment was issued in favor of Ames Crall, administrator of the estate of Patrick Connors. A one thousand dollar note, taken up by the estate in behalf of the firm, had fallen due and money was needed to pay it. The matter had been pending for some time.

One of the most important of the outside creditors, Henry L. Benedict & Co., of Milwaukee, heard of what was coming several days ago, and yesterday sent a man here to protect the firm's interests.

Before he settled on a plan, however, the matter had passed out of his reach. He called at the store early this morning only to find it locked and Sheriff Ward already on hand. "Oh, I say," he remarked anxiously as he rattled the lock, "let me in, will you? There's some things in there I want to get."

"Too bad," responded the official blandly, "but I guess you'd better stay outside. Confinement in a store might be too much for you."

This morning arrangements were made to inventory the stock, and decide on plans for its final disposal.

Mr. Crall's account against the firm was $3,000. Thus, Mr. Crall thinks will be paid about covered by the various assets.

What the outside debts are has not yet been disclosed. The only one known is that of Benedict & Co., which is about $1,500.

There is some talk on the street of plans for setting the firm once more on its feet, but what foundation the report has is unknown.

"I'm so BASHFUL."

"Crazy Patch" Proves to be a Frustrated Success.

A kick that defies analysis, a pretty face, an irresistible smile and a shrewdly almost frenzied—these are the requisites to popularity Kate Castleton has.

Her play—"Crazy Patch"—is a tissue of nonsense "constructed for laughing purposes only," and constructed so skillfully that its success was assumed from the first moment.

Miss Castleton herself takes the part of "Sybil Tubbs" the beautiful graduate of a young ladies' boarding school. Her support includes an escaped lunatic, whose mind vacillates between pugilism, mustard plasters and love; her cousin, a musical dandy; a handsome young physician who is first taken for the owner and then for the lunatic; and an uncle devoted to the extermination of bugs; several very pretty girls, and a policeman.

The company is a good one throughout. Eddie Foy, James T. Kelly and Emma Chambers, who take the three prominent parts, are all thorough artists. Mr. Foy being one of the best pantomime actors in the country. Of the songs and specialties of the piece, there can only be the highest praise. Miss Castleton's topical songs, especially, made the house fairly ring with applause. Her play is really a very enjoyable compound, and no case of "flu," however deep-seated, can be made proof against its attacks.

DEATHS.

News of the death of Mr. M. Sheehan, father of Mrs. Thomas Leach, of this city, was received to-day.

Mr. Sheehan lived at Hanover, and had many friends both there and throughout the county. His death was like the gradual dissolution of old age, and came without a struggle.

He was a good man, and a good citizen. He was a member of the Catholic church, and a member of the St. Patrick's society.

—The Gazette is in error when it states that Mayor Winans was absent four days in making the water works tour. He was absent only a week on that business. The matter is not material, but such statements should be made with care.

Yea, Mayor Winans was absent a week—he left home for Boston on May 3d, and returned on the 10th, in time to call a special meeting of the council for the 10th, being absent a week. His bill was for expenses. No charge was made for personal services and time.

—Mr. H. W. Tilson, in the Council, Bluffs Bee:—One of the topics upon the streets yesterday was about Alderman Keller signing the recommendation of the committee asking that the Richmond fire alarm company be not settled with at present on account of its ineffectual working. It appears Keller has held up the new system as long as he could conscientiously, and even to the eleventh hour had not put his name on the document with the balance of the committee. But for some reason he got thro' before the reading of it by the clerk.

THE OMAHA BILLS.

Timely Expressions from the Mayor and Some of the Aldermen.

Officials that are not Afraid to Express Honest Opinion.

Mayor Winans has the true spirit of reform, and has the courage to openly condemn municipal extravagance. In regard to the excessive charges made by Alca Horn and Thorngood, for their trip to Omaha, he says:—"The Gazette is all right on this Omaha bill business, and I endorse heartily the ground it has taken. It is all wrong to vote money in that way, and you have my support in exposing it."

This is the kind of courage the people like in an official. His expressions are the sentiments of the community, and everybody in the city, without dissent, are in sympathy with Mayor Winans for the position he has taken in regard to the bill of the aldermen named.

Such official expressions as these that rise above party, and above everything that smokes of official looseness, are appreciated by the voters of Jewellville, no matter to what party they belong.

By-and-by, perhaps, when the Recorder wakes up and learns that not one alderman who voted for the extravagant bill but classifies it as "Shady," it will open its eyes and conclude something has been going on in the city. The aldermen express their sentiments:

Ald. Carpenter—in the council meeting—By what authority were these gentlemen sent to Omaha and Council Bluffs?

Ald. O. C. McLean—at the council meeting—I have not seen anything in the journal authorizing this investigation.

Ald. J. B. McLean—at the council meeting—I was advertised to go, but I did not think it was the right thing to do to go at the expense of the city. I might have gone at my own expense.

Ald. C. C. McLean—at same meeting—I would like to see an itemized bill of the expenses. I do not think it right to pay one hundred and ninety dollars in a lump and not know what it is paid for, or what the city is getting for it.

Ald. Horn—at the council meeting—An itemized bill will not look very well.

Ald. Carpenter—at the council meeting—I would like to hear from these western tourists. I move that the payment of this bill of one hundred and ninety dollars be deferred until next meeting.

Ald. Fethers—at the meeting—It's law.

Ald. Reuther—at the meeting—Prothy law, it looks like a steal.

The question now is not concerning the necessity of a trip to Omaha; nor the purchase of a fire alarm; nor paying the expenses of the committee;—nor whether John C. Spencer or Howard T. Tilson did or didn't say this or that; but it is the extravagant bill, unexplained, and bearing no date whatever for future reference. This is what the people complain of, and on this point the Recorder sides with the council by remaining silent on the question, in order to be on the winning side.

As a dodger the Recorder is entitled to the bakery. It is bound to remain silent on the question of payment of the exorbitant bill of expenses of the fire committee in their Omaha trip, when there is not a man in the city, outside of the Recorder office, who has not condemned the action of the council in allowing the bill.

Not content with bringing outsiders into the discussion in order to dodge the point, the Recorder raises the question of the comparative circulation of the Gazette. Our answer to this is, we will exchange affidavits giving circulation.

For the reason that it requires ten lines of fact to contradict a one line lie, we drop the subject, leaving the whole to the judgment of the people whom it concerns.

RECAUGHT A TAIL.

A Country Girl Who Was Not as Fresh as She Might Have Been.

One of the gilded youth of this city is at home to-day with his left eye in deep mourning. And although the decoration was done by a rather slightly-built young lady it will last for a long time.

The young man is what "slangy" people call a "chippy chaser." Last night he sat his fancy on a pretty, modest-looking country girl who works for a downtown dressmaker. He dogged her steps until she turned off from Milwaukee street toward her home in the first ward.

When near Academy and Terrace streets, he caught up with her and grasped her by the arm. She jerked away, took a step backward and then stopped.

"If you haven't any better manners than that," she said, indignantly, "I'll try and teach you some."

She had in one hand a piece of brass curtain rod wrapped in tissue paper, and before the youth knew what was coming the heavy rod struck him fairly across the face. That was enough. He turned and fled followed by a mocking laugh and an invitation to "call again!" The plucky young lady finished her walk without further disturbance.

THE SEWING SCHOOL.

Reviewing the Work of Trinity Church Sewing School.

Fay of our people, except those most intimately connected with the work are aware of the permanent good being done among the youth of our city by our local industrial societies. Moral influences are there set in motion whose breadth must reach the expense of all lives. Education is there received which makes the people more valuable to himself and society. Occupation as a preventive of all that idleness entails is the motive power which moves these institutions and right thoroughly are they doing their work. Prominent among these stands the Trinity Parish sewing school, an organization which admits all little girls between the ages of five and fourteen whatever their religious associations may be.

This school began in a small way but upon correct principles, and under judicious management, and competency in instruction it has made wonderful progress. Its attendance during the 2d term has been about fifty-five, a total of seventy children have received instruction. Many useful articles have been made by these little fingers which were readily sold, thus keeping the finances of the school in a healthy condition.

The past term, covering six months work, has just closed, and to celebrate this event, a gathering of the scholars and their friends was had last evening at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Doe, on West Milwaukee street. The parlor was filled with the happy ones, each proud in the success of their work and each vowing with her fellow in the making this celebration a festive one.

A bounteous supper was spread, after which presenting the previously adopted policy, prizes were given to the pupils who had made the most proficiency. These were presented by the pastor, Rev. James Sidel. The prizes and their recipients were: First, an elegant writing desk, Alma Weiss. Second, a beautiful book, Lulu Whitton. Third, "Penny Stories," Nellie Ransom. Fourth, Castor and Annie McCaffrey were equally entitled to receive this prize, so to decide it a vote was taken and the first named was the fortunate one. A fourth prize, a book, was given the second named. It was a most happy ending of successful school work.

Mrs. M. W. Furler has been long connected with the school as teacher and principal, and to her is due a large measure of the credit for this successful work. Last evening she tendered her resignation to take immediate effect, which was most reluctantly accepted. She goes to Milwaukee for a time, and the best wishes of her pupils and friends will accompany her. "Honor to whom honor is due," and all honor to those loyal hearts, whose labors of love reach beyond the environment of self, and whose faithful devotion to reward must be gained in the world beyond.

YACCO SHAVES HIMSELF.

A Monkey That is Rapidly Adding to His Stock of Accomplishments.

Adolph Deyer, of No. 19 Fulton street, Brooklyn, has a monkey which, though young and comparatively untrained, is learning many of the useful arts of the human race. Yacco, says the Brooklyn Herald, was brought from a ship carpenter who brought him from Brazil six months ago. Mr. Deyer has since then been training him in the useful arts of the human race. Yacco selected to live on the sloping roof of the shed and watch the movements of the men as they came into the yard. After awhile he came into the yard. After awhile he came into the yard. After awhile he came into the yard.

A few days ago some one threw a piece of a broken chair into the yard and Yacco went up to it with a stick and pulled it to the highest point he could reach. He then sat on it and looked down at the men who were working in the yard. He then sat on it and looked down at the men who were working in the yard.

He then sat on it and looked down at the men who were working in the yard. He then sat on it and looked down at the men who were working in the yard.
